Écrire le français avec l’alphabet alfonic ?

L’alphabet alfonic est un outil : il a pour but d’aider les enfants et les apprenants à entrer dans l’écriture et la lecture du français sans se tracasser de questions orthographiques. L’orthographe vient après, une fois qu’on a bien identifié tous les sons (ou plus précisément les phonèmes) du français.

L’alfonic utilise autant que possible les lettres déjà utilisées par l’orthographe française, contrairement à l’alphabet phonétique international (API) qui suit sa logique propre. Mais pour aider ceux qui maîtriseraient déjà l’API, nous l’avons noté systématiquement en bas de chaque page (en gris).

Pour les profs et les parents à qui l’alfonic n’est pas encore familier, nous débutons chaque page par la graphie du son le plus communément utilisée dans l’orthographe, entre guillemets. Chaque image est également présentée en alfonic puis en orthographe.

Autant que possible, les phonèmes sont présentés en début de mot, en milieu et en fin de mot, pour habituer les enfants à les repérer où qu’ils se situent.

Dans le souci de ne pas embrouiller les jeunes enfants avec des subtilités trop complexes, les voyelles longues « â » (de pâte), « î » (d’île) et « ê » (de maître) ne sont pas présentées ici, car leur articulation est la même que pour les voyelles courtes correspondantes (du moins en Belgique ; car en France, le « a » bref et le « â » d’arrière font entendre une différence de timbre).

Les semi-voyelles « i » (de noyer, cahier, ail, nouille), « u » (de huit, cuirre, juin) et « w » (de ouate, oui, whisky, wallon) ne sont pas présentées ici non plus.

Bonne découverte !
